

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Bibliographical material is arranged in the following order by chapter:

1. Documents
2. Personal or written interviews
3. Newspapers
4. Periodicals
5. Published and unpublished books, pamphlets and theses.

To clarify in the location of these materials, letters in parentheses referring to the library in which the volume or document is located follow many of the more obscure bibliographical notes. Symbols for the library holdings are:

THE NATIVE PEOPLES

Materials on the Indians of Shasta County are quite accessible. Of major importance is the volume Handbook of the Indians of California, the classic source, by Alfred Kroeber. A good synthesis on the Indians of this area is presented by Paul Schulz in Indians of Lassen Volcanic National Park and Vicinity, while the various University of California publications are basic to any analysis of the individual language groups. The most helpful of these studies are: Cora DuBois, Wintu Ethnography; Sapir and Spier, Notes on the Culture of the Yana; Thomas Garth, Atsugewi Ethnography; and Fred Kniffen's Achomawi Geography. To stimulate one's interest in the Indians of this area, Theodora Kroeber's Ishi in Two Worlds provides an exciting introduction. The accounts of local natives by Steven Powers in his Tribes of California is worthwhile, especially in regard to the Wintu and Achomawi. The Indian-white relationship is best summarized by a perusal of the pages of the Shasta Courier for the 1850's and 60's. An article by Ann Hunt in the 1960 issue of the Shasta Historical Society annual, the Covered Wagon, also clearly presents certain incidents in this conflict.

THE TRAIL BLAZERS

The material on the "Trail Blazers" into Shasta County is both varied and limited, at least as far as their activities in this particular geographical area is concerned. The best general works seem to be This Reckless Breed of Men and Pathfinders by Robert G. Cleland. The writings of Alice B. Maloney, the available journals and biographies were all helpful. Mrs. California Quint of Redding, who has spent much time in a study of the earliest routes through Shasta County, provided additional information.

PIERSON B. READING – THE FATHER OF SHASTA COUNTY

There is much available material, both of a primary and secondary nature, on Pierson Barton Reading. The Reading Collection in the California Section of the State Library contains much of Major Reading's correspondence. Other primary materials located both in the Sutter's Fort archives and the Bancroft Library are additionally helpful. A University of California Master's thesis "Pierson B. Reading, California Pioneer," written in 1937 by Lottie Osoffsky, is a valuable synthesis, particularly on the subject of Reading's initial journey to California. The Genealogical and Biographical Memorial of the Reading Family by Josiah Leach is extremely valuable for background. These basic materials are well supplemented by local newspaper accounts, magazine articles, and references in a variety of books.

THE MINING ERA

Despite the brevity of my summary, there is a great volume of information on the history of mining in Shasta County. The older newspapers, particularly the Shasta Courier are literally overflowing with mining news, so much so that the problem becomes one of elimination rather than accumulation. Of great value are the various periodicals, including the detailed reports of the State Mineralogist as well as several articles in the California Journal of Mines and Geology. The best among these is the Report of the State Mineralogist, Bulletin 50, for 1913-14. Articles of varied origin in the Shasta Historical Society files and scrapbooks of the Shasta Historical Monument at Shasta are additionally informative.

SHASTA—QUEEN CITY OF THE NORTH

Shasta city is distinct in having had more written regarding it than any other Shasta County locality. The color and early importance of this gold rush city prompted many to record its past. In the Bancroft Library the Bancroft Scrapbook of Northern California contains a large number of articles on the town. The Shasta Courier, dating back to 1852, is a basic source. Helpful are the summary articles written in other newspapers including the 50th anniversary issue of the Anderson Valley News (June 30, 1932), the Centennial issue of the Redding Record-Searchlight (June 10, 1950), as well as the other Searchlight issues cited, and early copies of the Daily Alta California. All of the listed magazine articles were helpful to this study. Mae Helene Boggs' My Playhouse Was a Concord Coach, Frank and Chappell's History of Shasta County, and Walter Fink's "The Old Town of Shasta" each contain a wealth of information on the town. A Chico State College Master's Thesis by George Kutras "Shasta, California: A History, 1849-1888" is an extremely useful synthesis, while Robert O'Brien's California Called Them, written for popular reading, contains much colorful information on this old town.

REDDING—THE HUB CITY

Most of the bibliographical information on Redding is piecemeal since there is no comprehensive historical survey of the city. The newspapers down through the years are extremely helpful. They include the Shasta Courier (although very critical in the early days), The Redding Independent, the Republican Free Press and the Record-Searchlight. Many articles on Redding from both local and out-of-town papers are available in the Shasta County Scrapbook at the California State Library and in the local historical society scrapbooks. Of the periodicals, an article in the August 6, 1951, issue of Fortnight entitled "Redding, Willing and Able," is the best. My Playhouse Was a Concord Coach by Mae Helene Boggs, the Shasta County centennial history by Rosena Giles, the Memorial and Biographical History of Northern California published in 1891, and Frank and Chappell's 1881 county history and business directory present much pertinent information.

ANDERSON—THE CITY BUILT UPON LUMBER

Newspapers form the basis of the extant historical material on Anderson. The files of the Anderson Valley News are of basic importance, while the Anderson correspondence with the Shasta Courier provides information dating back to the town's inception. Several other old newspapers, principally those located at the California State Library, are helpful. Again Frank and Chappell's History and Business Directory of Shasta County is pertinent regarding the early days of Anderson, while pioneer interviews and other materials compiled by the county historical society are valuable. The newspaper annuals, both in the 1880's and early years of the 20th Century, provide additional information. A recent Master's thesis at Chico State College by James Carroll presents much material on the history of Anderson's schools.

COTTONWOOD—ON THE SOUTHERN BOUNDARY

Cottonwood possesses the single most comprehensive community history of any county locality. This is Myrtle McNamer's Way Back When. Much investigation is contained in this detailed account of Cottonwood's past. In addition, newspaper accounts are extremely valuable, especially the Anderson Valley News and the Shasta Courier. Some old Cottonwood papers are located at the State Library while others (1900-1910) are available at the University of the Pacific. Again the files of the historical society are valuable, particularly an unpublished article on the town by Rosena Giles. E. J. Lewis' Tehama County history, Mrs. Boggs' anthology, and Frank and Chappell's history are also noteworthy.

NORTHEASTERN SHASTA COUNTY

The location of information on northeastern Shasta County is not an easy task. Two sources are most helpful. The 50th Anniversary edition of the Fall River Tidings published in 1944 is a basic source, while a Chico State Master's thesis by Ernest Neasham entitled "Fall River Valley, An Examination of Historical Sources" is also of prime importance. Numerous articles in both the Shasta County Scrapbook in the Bancroft Library and the Shasta County Resources Scrapbook in the State Library were pertinent. The newspapers, both from the Fall River area, as well as outside papers, especially the Shasta Courier, which had a Fall River correspondent, are worthwhile. These are the basic sources aided by the newspaper annuals. Some information is probably also existant in the files of the Fort Crook Historical Society; however, this material was not available during the time this study was made.

THE OTHER COMMUNITIES

Because of the wide variety of sources available, a precise statement of materials for the smaller communities is almost impossible. The local newspapers are again important, particularly the Shasta Courier, which maintained a correspondent in many of the outlying areas. Walter Frickstad's A Century of California Post Offices, 1848-1954, a USC Ed.D. dissertation by Ernest Stump entitled History of the Organization and Development of Education in Shasta County, and Place Names of Shasta County by Gertrude Steger are of basic importance. Frank and Chappell's history of 1881 is extremely useful regarding the early towns, while May H. Southern's Our Storied Landmarks is also quite comprehensive. The county scrapbooks at the Bancroft and California State Libraries as well as those at the State Monument at Shasta are worthwhile, while Miss Giles' county history (1949) adds much information. In the southern portion of the county, Myrtle McNamer's Way Back When is valuable on the rural areas. The Shasta Historical Society annuals, the Covered Wagon, contain many pertinent articles, while the society's unpublished scrapbooks and pioneer interviews are also of real assistance. The official records of county government, the minutes of the Court of Sessions, 1851-1858, and those of the Board of Supervisors, 1858-Present, are pertinent to any study of this kind.

THE LUMBERING STORY

Newspapers again provide the greatest bulk of information on Shasta County lumbering. Of particular help were articles in the Anderson Valley News of June 30, 1932, and March 3, 1930, as well as the Record-Searchlight centennial issue of June 10, 1950. The agricultural department reports on "The Area and Ownership of Forest Land in Shasta County" are good. Once again Frank and Chappell's history was of assistance. The periodic descriptive circulars and pamphlets issued by the larger mills contain pertinent information. This study was also assisted by the written statistical statements of officials representing the larger Shasta County lumber concerns.

AGRICULTURE—FOOD FROM THE GOOD EARTH

Of basic importance to the story of local agriculture are the early reports of the State Surveyor-General, the Census statistics, the U. S. Department of Agriculture Fruit and Nut Acreage surveys, the annual crop reports of the county agricultural department, and Report #22 by the California Department of Water Resources. Of special help is a small statistical study of county agriculture from 1899 to 1944 put out by the county Agricultural Commission. The early descriptive folders contain much agricultural information, as do the local papers, particularly the Anderson Valley News.

THE WATER RESOURCES

Information on the water resources of Shasta County is fairly extensive. Basic to any water development study are the bulletins issued by the California Department of Water Resources. Bulletins 22 (Shasta County Investigation, 1960), 163.58 (Northeastern Counties Investigation), and the 1961 Progress Report on the Upper Sacramento River Basin Investigation are the most pertinent. Of particular note in a study of hydroelectric developments in Shasta County are the PG&E magazines available in that company's district office in Red Bluff. The two large volumes of Central Valley Project Documents are likewise significant. A 1961 statement by Arnold S. Rummelsburg, Director of the Shasta County Department of Water Resources on "Local Water Problems in Shasta County," is an excellent contemporary account of the water resources situation.
